

The Post and Courier

Select Health is Recognized for Support

The Post and Courier

Published Apr. 15, 2010

122B.Thursday, April 15, 2010

POSTANDCOURIER.COM

LOWCOUNTRY FOOD BANK

Select Health is recognized for support

Nearly a year after the opening of its new facility, the Lowcountry Food Bank recently gave special recognition to Select Health for its support of the organization's Growing Forward Capital Campaign.

During a surprise presentation, Lowcountry Food Bank Executive Director D. Jermaine Husser and several staff members presented Select Health President and CEO Michael Jernigan with a signed photograph of the Paul Hulseby Community Food and Nutrition Center.

"You gave of your time when nobody else believed that we could raise $5 million," said Husser.

Select Health, under Jernigan's leadership, was one of the first contributors to support the Lowcountry Food Bank's Growing Forward Capital Campaign, a multi-million dollar fundraising initiative launched in 2005 to help the food bank relocate and expand its mission. Jernigan helped raised more than $2.7 million for the Food Bank during his term as campaign chairman.

"I certainly believe in the work of the food bank and applaud the impact the organization has had on the state and the Lowcountry," said Jernigan.

The Lowcountry Food Bank was founded in 1983 as a clearinghouse for donated food items. Its mission is to feed the hungry in the 10 coastal counties of South Carolina.